BRITISH TRADE WITH THE FAR EAST IN 1891.

In a review of the Board of Trade returns for 1891 the London and China Express says:-With regard more particularly to our trade with the Far East the returns for the twelve months show a considerable shrinkage in the exports of cotton yarn to Japan, amounting to over 8,000,000 lbs, while there is a decrease in the case of China of about 1,500,000 lbs. The Straits Settlements, on the other hand, have tuken a little more than in 1890. The total figures for the piece goods trade during last year show a decrease in every case but the Dutch East Indies, which have taken over 56,000,000 yards more of this class of goods than in 1890. but large and satisfactory as this increase is it does not compensate for the shrinkage which has taken place in the shipments to 103,778.50 Chine, Japan, the Philippine Islands, and the Straits Settlements. China has taken over 86.000,000 yards loss, Japan between 2,000,000 $1,529,070,97 and 3,000,000 yards, the Straits Settlements about 40,000,000 yards, and the Philippine portions of the dominions which acknowledge rate of interest (generally 3 per cent. a month) by remarking that the result of the informthe away of the Siamese king are known to from Indian money lenders at Maulmein. A ation he obtained with regard to the of their inhabitants. Along the banks of the Mckhong, or Cambodia River, these populations, though governed by afficials of their own race, are directly subject to Bangkok; but in the north they are divided into six Stales, ruled over by their hereditary chiefs, and thus are semiindependent. These six states are Chicogmai, Lamphun, Lakhon, Nan. Phre, and Luang Phrabang. In the first five Asiatic subjects of the Queen, chiefly natives of Burmah, have for many years carri d on an extensive trade in teak timber, taking leases of the forests from the chiefs and other owners. Almost from the very commencement of the diplomatic relations with Siam, which followed upon the conclusion in 1855 of Sir John Bow: ring's treaty of commerce, disputes and lawsuits began to arise in connection with the rights thus obtained. In 18:4 a treative wes negotiated between the two kings of Siam and the Vicerov of India, which had for its principal object the establishment on the spot of tribanals for the determination of such disputes; but having fuiled in completely securing the objects aimed at it was superseded in 1883 by a Fresh treaty concluded between Great Britain and Siam. At first this treaty applied only to Chiengmai, Lamphuo, and Lakhon, but its operation was afterwards extended to Nan and Phre. arrangements looked well on paper, but owing to the vast amount of arrears which had account lated in consequence of the failure of the treaty of 1875 they did not work smoothly, so that. became advisable for me to pay a visit to Chiengmai towards the end of 1885.

THE LAOS STATES OF SIAM. A paper was read before the Foreign and Colonial Section of the Society of Arts on the 12th January, on the Luos States, by Mr Ernest Sidow, C.M.G. The chair was taken by Sir Thomas Wade, K.C.B., who briefly introduced the lecturer.

Within a few hours after my arrival I receive a visit from the King's Chief Commissioner, Phyn Monkri by name, a man of about forty, strongly built, and with a p'easing constenance. He goodnaturedly affered to downything in his power to render my sojourn agreeable, and afterwards fulfilled his promise in a way that proved his words to be more than a more compliment. I made the Chief's acquaintance on the following afternoon. He lives in a fina bouse built in semi-European style, and is a jolly-looking old fellow of sixty seven, not without a cartain measure of nation onuning, but intensely ignorant. The conversation turned upon the obstruction to navigati a caused by the rapids in the river on the southern boundary of his territory. He would not believe that dynamite could be used to destroy rocks There is no doubt that he looks hood the rapids as a heaven-bestowed barrior against aggression from the South. But some day a railway may, be constructed up the Menaur Valley, and then we shall witness the complete incorporation. of Ch'engmai with Siam. I asked him what a place called Chemtong, distant about two days' journey on elephants, that I ought certainly to I could take it on my way down to Bangdistance to the north-east. Until within a few years ago the water used to leap into the air with a loud noise. Then I ought to visit the pagoda half-way-up Doi Su-thep. I asked him about Doi Chieng-dao. Well, the people used formerly to ascend it, but it is now inaccessible. He did not know why, but the Laus could not go
